Brachiosaurus

Why were the shoulders of Brachiosaurus so high?

Did you know? Its front legs were longer than its back legs. That raised its shoulders and gave its body a sloping shape. Together with its long neck, the tall front end helped it reach leaves high above the ground.