Aurora Dragon

Why are the northern lights often green?

Did you know? Particles from the Sun give energy to gases high above Earth. When oxygen releases some of that energy as light, it can glow green. The real northern lights shine over the mountains behind this imaginary dragon.